

Claude Kolm Named RHS Top Scientist

Reseda High School has many outstanding students in numerous departments who receive little or no recognition. One of these students is Claude Kolm, B-12, who was recently awarded a medal by the Southern California Industry and Education Council and named Reseda's Outstanding Science Student. The selection was made on the basis of grade point average and science achievements.

In a recent interview, Claude expressed the belief that his 93 percentile rating received on the American Chemical Society Test could have been one of the reasons for the award. He took the test at Cal Poly Pomona last April as one of a thousand students recommended by chemistry instructors throughout Southern California.

Ironically, with all this going for him, Claude isn't planning a career in the field of science.
